The 'perfect skills storm' is forming. Is your company ready to face the challenges ahead? Is your company robust, efficient, effective and sustainable and will you still be in business in five years?

AgriFood Skills Australia in conjunction with various industry bodies and state and local governments around Australia, will bring an interactive breakfast seminar series to a location near you over the next twelve months.

In coming years many Australian food processors can expect to face the challenges posed by:

- » Large hikes in energy costs
- » Access to an affordable water supply
- » More regulation demanded by a carbon constrained economy
- » More demanding and discerning 'green consumers'
- » Gaps in the right skills to deal with numerous challenges

More than ever, sustainability is crucial for the survival of your business. It is not just about diagnostics and technical 'fixes' and processes. A truly sustainable business requires cultural change. To survive and compete you need to lead your staff to think about risk management and efficiency in their everyday work practices.

These focused, interactive seminars will allow you to achieve:

- » Cost savings at an early stage
- » Strategies to prepare for change and engage your workforce
- » Ways to minimise the carbon impact of your supply chain
- » Funding options to support a sustainable business

Participation will provide you with a pre-seminar 'Green Skills' needs analysis and financial support for ongoing exchange of ideas and skills development with other enterprise leaders.

Don't leave it until it's too late.

your business.
